

Hi I'm Shahira the content creator behind Afro Glory Blog. I really value having you on my platform and enjoying this space I have created which is why I will never use your personal information in an unpleasant manor. I can guarantee to you that I would never sell, rent or trade your personal information. Please read on to see further details about my privacy policy and how I look after any personal information you share with me.

This website 'wordpress' uses cookies to collect information. This includes information about browsing and purchasing behaviour by anyone who accesses the website. Don't worry though, it just means the adverts and services you see on my blog are tailored to you. Be sure to take a look at Wordpress's privacy policy and cookie policy for more information.

I don't currently have a newsletter out but hope to launch one in the near future. When I launch my newsletter I will be using your email address and name to send you a customised newsletter containing information of interest to you regarding my blog.

What will I be monitoring? I will be gather statistics around email opening and clicks using industry standard technologies to help me improve the newsletter each time based on what you are most interested in.

How will I be monitoring? I can see what you are most interested in because MailChimp (my newsletter provider) will let me know how many times links have been opened from my newsletter.

How can I remove myself from the statistic collection process? You will always be free to unsubscribe from my newsletter at any point. Each newsletter will have a clear unsubscribe button at the bottom.

This information is correct as of 25th May 2018 and will be reviewed in 2 months.